NOTE AND COMMENT

PRIZE COMPETITION FOR ESSAYS UPON AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS OFFERED BY THE TRUSTEES OF THE FUND ESTABLISHED BY MR. WILLIAM W. COOK FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE MICHIGAN LAW REVIEW.

American institutions, whether of a historical, legal or political nature, have never perhaps been subjected to more searching scrutiny than at the present time. The application to industry, commerce, and, indeed, to all of the occupations of life, of scientific discoveries and mechanical inventions, has produced profound changes in our mode of life and in our thinking. The great War intensified and accelerated the process of transition and change, and has subjected all contemporary institutions of every kind to severe strain. This is all obvious, and perhaps may seem too trite to justify repetition, but the deductions from these facts are frequently unscientific and often hysterical. There is need of study and thinking about American institutions.
